Hollowridge Athletic Launches the Trailfire 3, Its Lightest All-Terrain Trail Runner Yet

A reworked outsole and a new midsole foam target longer trail days without adding weight

PORTLAND, Ore. — October 6, 2026 — Hollowridge Athletic today announced the Trailfire 3, the third generation of its all-terrain trail running shoe, arriving in stores and online on October 20, 2026. The Trailfire 3 pairs a redesigned traction outsole with a new lightweight midsole foam, cutting nearly 20 grams from the previous model while extending outsole durability on mixed terrain.

The Trailfire line has become one of Hollowridge Athletic's best-selling categories since its debut in 2023, worn by recreational trail runners and several sponsored ultramarathon athletes. The Trailfire 3 keeps the line's rock plate and gaiter attachment points while widening the toe box based on two years of customer fit feedback.

“Runners told us they wanted the protection of the Trailfire without feeling like they were carrying it,” said Priya Nakamura, Vice President of Product at Hollowridge Athletic. “The Trailfire 3 is the lightest shoe we’ve put a rock plate in, and it’s not close.”

KEY FEATURES

- Redesigned lugged outsole with 15% more surface contact on loose or wet terrain
- New FeatherCore midsole foam, saving approximately 20 grams per shoe over the Trailfire 2
- Full-length rock plate retained from previous generations
- Wider toe box based on customer fit feedback
- Compatible with Hollowridge's clip-on trail gaiters (sold separately)
